Q3 2026 Fund Commentary

Commentary and opinions are provided by CLIML (Portfolio Solutions Group)

Market Commentary

Global equities gained over the third quarter of 2026 and outperformed global bonds. Resilient economic activity, strong corporate earnings and continued investment in artificial intelligence (AI) supported markets, offsetting rising inflation pressures and higher interest rates. Investors looked through higher energy prices and further central bank monetary tightening, helped by stable labour markets and continued consumer spending.

Regional performance varied. Japanese equities led, helped by strong corporate earnings, share buybacks and ongoing corporate governance reforms. U.S. equities advanced on favourable earnings growth, while European markets lagged amid concerns about energy costs, higher interest rates and weaker earnings momentum. Canadian equities posted a modest gain, supported by the information technology, materials and energy sectors. Emerging markets equities declined because weakness in semiconductor-related industries weighed on returns.

The Canadian bond market posted a negative total return. Higher energy prices renewed concerns about inflation, and resilient growth reduced expectations for interest rate cuts, so investors anticipated further monetary policy tightening and bond yields rose. Elevated borrowing requirements and increased debt issuance also pressured government bond yields. Shorter-term bonds held up better than longer-duration bonds because they're less sensitive to rising interest rates, and corporate bonds generally held up better than government bonds on stable credit fundamentals.

Performance

An allocation to fixed income contributed to performance. Allocations to Liquid Alternatives Strategy and to Counsel U.S. Growth Equity also contributed.

Counsel U.S. Growth Equity contributed because of security selection in the information technology and financials sectors. Counsel Fixed Income contributed because of corporate exposure and because spreads stayed relatively tight.

Off-benchmark allocations to Counsel Global Small Cap and Counsel Global Real Estate detracted from performance. Exposure to Counsel International Growth and Counsel Canadian Growth managers also detracted.

Counsel Balanced Portfolio Series GA

Counsel Global Small Cap detracted because of an underweight allocation to Australia and overweight allocations to India, Israel and Italy. Counsel International Growth detracted because of security selection within the financials sector. An overweight allocation to information technology also detracted, as did an overweight allocation to South Korea and an underweight allocation to Japan.

Portfolio Activity

There were no significant trades during the quarter. In line with the sub-advisor's mid- to longer-term views, there were no purchases or sales, and position sizes weren't increased or decreased.

Outlook

The third quarter of 2026 reinforced the resilience of the global economy but highlighted a growing imbalance between strong market performance and more constrained policy flexibility. In the portfolio manager's view, AI-related investment supported growth, earnings and capital spending, which helped offset higher energy costs and trade uncertainty. Elevated valuations, concentrated market leadership, rising corporate financing needs and tighter monetary policy have, in the portfolio manager’s view, reduced the margin for error. Economic activity remains firm, though households, businesses and governments may become more sensitive to higher borrowing costs.

In this environment, the portfolio manager's focus remains on balancing participation with risk management. The portfolio manager maintains diversified exposure to global growth opportunities while recognizing that the AI investment cycle appears more mature than earlier in the year. In the portfolio manager’s view, broad diversification across regions, sectors, investment styles and fixed income remains an important tool for reducing reliance on a narrow group of market leaders. The portfolio manager retains a modest preference for equities over fixed income and favours U.S. assets relative to Canada, though with lower conviction than earlier in 2026.
